2026 General Election Results: Final Certified Results

Washington State | Final results as certified by counties, Tuesday, November 24, 2026 | Prepared by Lobby Washington

Election Overview

The bottom line: House Democrats will hold 69 seats to 29 (68 confirmed, with the 25th District recount deciding the last one), the Senate is unchanged at 30 to 19, and voters rejected the income tax repeal by about 16 points.

Washington's 39 counties certified their 2026 general election results on Tuesday, November 24, so these are the final numbers. About 3.2 million ballots were counted. Two legislative races now go to automatic recounts, and neither is expected to change the balance of power. The final race-by-race results, including a day-by-day look at how the closest races moved from election night through certification, follow.

What changed since our last update, and where the final numbers landed:

- The 25th District is headed for a hand recount. Jenn Marie Strickling (D) finished 80 votes ahead of Rep. Cyndy Jacobsen (R), or 0.14 percent, inside the range for an automatic hand recount. If her lead holds, House Democrats will hold 69 of 98 seats.
- The 35th District Senate race is headed for a machine recount. Sen. Drew MacEwen (R) finished 284 votes ahead of Carolina Mejia (D), or 0.36 percent, which falls within the range for an automatic machine recount. A machine recount rarely moves more than a handful of votes, so MacEwen is expected to keep the seat, and the Senate stays at 30 Democrats and 19 Republicans.
- Every other legislative race is settled. Rep. Tarra Simmons (D) finished about 550 votes ahead of Daria Ilgen (D) in the 23rd, outside recount range, and Stacy Willoughby (D) won the 12th by nearly 1,000 votes.

Washington's Congressional Races

No changes. Rep. Marie Gluesenkamp Perez (D) won reelection in the 3rd District, so Senate Republican Leader John Braun (R) returns to Olympia, and Rep. Michael Baumgartner (R) won the 5th by more than 15,000 votes. Washington's delegation stays at eight Democrats and two Republicans.

Washington Ballot Initiatives

- I-645 (income tax repeal): FAILED, by about 16 points. The fight over the income tax now moves to the courts.
- I-638 (girls' school sports): PASSED, with about 56 percent of the vote. A King County Superior Court judge will hear the challenge to it on December 3, the day it takes effect.
- I-001 (Parents' Bill of Rights): FAILED, by about 5 points.
- Tacoma Safe Homes for All (Measure 1): PASSED, with about 60 percent of the vote.
- Bellingham Rent-Pricing Ban (Initiative 26-01): PASSED, with about 80 percent of the vote.

Washington Supreme Court

Sean O'Donnell won the open Position 4 by about 37,000 votes. Candidates backed by the governor and Democratic leaders won the other four races comfortably.

Washington State Legislature

House. Democrats flipped ten seats held by Republicans before the election, including both seats in the 25th if Strickling holds on through the recount. Republicans held the 35th District House seats and the open 39th.

Senate. Rep. Cindy Ryu (D) defeated Sen. Jesse Salomon (D) in the 32nd, and MacEwen (R) is expected to hold the 35th. The Senate is unchanged at 30 to 19.

Moderate Democrats. Challengers from the left defeated Reps. Sharon Tomiko Santos (D), Amy Walen (D), and Melanie Morgan (D). Rep. Tarra Simmons (D) held her seat.

What it adds up to. House Democrats will have at least 68 seats, well past the two-thirds line, and 69 if Strickling's lead survives the recount. In the Senate, Democrats keep their current majority.

Washington's Balance of Power

Body	Before	If current leads hold	Change
State House (98)	59 D, 39 R	69 D, 29 R	D +10
State Senate (49)	30 D, 19 R	30 D, 19 R	No change
U.S. House delegation (10)	8 D, 2 R	8 D, 2 R	No change

The House number assumes Strickling holds her lead through the recount. The Senate number assumes MacEwen holds his lead in the 35th.

What This Means for Us

Twenty-seven new lawmakers will arrive in Olympia in January, counting Strickling, and five House members are moving to the Senate. They are forming their views on our issues now. If you or your members are in one of their districts, let us know and we will set up a meeting before session begins. The table at the end of this report lists every new lawmaker by district.

A reminder: the Center for Pragmatic Leadership's Washington Summit is November 30 through December 2 at Semiahmoo. Please have your leadership register at luma.com/g47bu0ko and let me know you are going.

What Comes Next

With certification complete, the recounts in the 25th and 35th come next, and the Secretary of State will certify statewide results in early December. Committee Assembly Days run December 7 through 11, and the 2027 session convenes Monday, January 11. We will update you if either recount changes the outcome.

Statewide Ballot Measures

Measure	What a Yes vote does	Yes	No	Status
I-645 (income tax repeal)	Repeals SB 6346, the 9.9% tax on household income above $1 million (effective 2028), and bars income taxes at every level of government	42.0% (1,347,170)	58.0% (1,861,865)	FAILED
I-638 (girls' school sports)	Requires middle and high school athletes to compete based on sex at birth	55.9% (1,782,063)	44.1% (1,405,556)	PASSED
IL26-001 (Parents' Bill of Rights)	Restores the original 2024 text of I-2081, undoing the Legislature's 2025 changes	47.6% (1,484,211)	52.4% (1,636,083)	FAILED

The No side outraised the initiative campaigns by a wide margin, more than $18 million against Let's Go Washington's mostly signature-gathering budget, with a separate $3.8 million Yes on I-645 effort. Washington voters have rejected income tax proposals at the ballot every time since the 1930s, most recently in 2010.

Bellingham: Initiative 26-01	Bans algorithmic rent-pricing software and landlord agreements to set rents	81%	19%	PASSED

Tacoma figures from an earlier Pierce County count; Bellingham from election-night returns.

Final results as certified by Washington's counties on Tuesday, November 24, 2026. Percentages include write-ins, as the state reports them. House Democrats flipped ten seats (12-1, 14-1, 14-2, 17-1, 17-2, 18-1, 18-2, 25-1, 25-2, and 26-2) for a 69 to 29 majority, assuming Strickling holds her lead through the 25-2 recount. In multi-candidate primaries, the A / B primary figures show only the two who advanced.
